Once a sleepy fishing village, Labuan Bajo has a long history of trade connections and exchanges between the nomadic marine tribe and the indigenous land tribe of western Flores Island, called Manggarai. Today, Labuan Bajo is a modern port town ideal for those wanting to revive and relax either on land or between cruises at sea. The area is popular for day trips into Western Flores, neighboring islands that showcase stunning sunsets or sunrises, Manta Ray dive points and the famous Komodo National Park home to the famous Komodo Dragons!

In recent years, the town has been rebuilt as part of the Indonesian governments' tourism promotion of the Flores culture and handicrafts. The area is now slowly transforming into a luxury travel destination to attract domestic and foreign tourists.
